Docusign acknowledges receipt of the subpoena issued in the above-referenced matter.

Docusign is a non-party to this action with no independent knowledge of, or stake in, the underlying dispute, and objects to the extent the subpoena imposes obligations exceeding those properly placed on a non-party. Docusign has responded to previous subpoenas and provided data that overlaps with what is requested here. Docusign respectfully requests that you confirm the scope of your request seeks only documents relevant to the underlying action, reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence proportional to the needs of the case, and reserves its right to formally object to overly-broad disclosures of customer data. Docusign objects to the extent the requested records are equally or more readily available to "First Acceptance Corporation" through its own administration of their Docusign account.

In response to the broad categories of data requested in your subpoena, please note that Docusign has no access to and cannot provide documents for many of these categories, including account ownership, supervisory/reporting structures, account administrator settings, including administrator changes, permission sets, records of shared inboxes, delegated signing, signing groups, or send-on-behalf-of configurations, or account-level retention policies. Docusign objects to providing invoices and payment data containing amounts billed, paid, or otherwise outstanding as proprietary and confidential information.

Regarding the email addresses and/or account(s) identified in the subpoena, Docusign is only capable of querying its systems for email addresses actively associated with a Docusign account. If a user did not set up a Docusign account, Docusign will be unable to search for records using that user's email address. Additionally, if a user changes the email address associated with their account, Docusign will be unable to search for records using the former email address.

Please also note that Docusign encrypts the contents of customer documents on its system and Docusign employees do not generally have access to the contents of these documents. Furthermore, the Federal Stored Communications Act ("SCA"), 18 U.S.C. § 2701 et seq., strictly prohibits a provider, such as Docusign, from disclosing the contents of communications to third parties absent a Search Warrant. In response to requests for envelope records, Docusign will generally produce the Certificate of Completion

Pursuant to Docusign's Terms and Conditions with all customers, Docusign provides prompt written notification to all customers whose data is subject to disclosure in response to a subpoena and allows them an opportunity to review the proposed disclosure. If a customer files a Motion to Quash the subpoena, Docusign will withhold the production until the dispute is resolved by the Court in which the matter is pending. If you wish to prevent customer notification, you must provide a Non-Disclosure Order.

Docusign will produce responsive documents electronically in the form in which they are ordinarily maintained or reasonably usable unless a specific form is specified by agreement or court order. Docusign does not waive any objections it may have to your subpoena by this correspondence.

Please feel free to contact us should you have any questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

Ezra Denman | Sr. Employment & Litigation Compliance Manager | legalprocess@docusign.com
