STATE OF GEORGIA

[redacted]
Plaintiff,

v.

FIRST ACCEPTANCE INSURANCE COMPANY OF GEORGIA, INC. et al.

Defendant.

Civil Action File No. 25CV10635

DEFENDANT'S FIRST ACCEPTANCE INSURANCE COMPANY OF GEORGIA'S GLOBAL OBJECTIONS AND REQUEST FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER REGARDING PLAINTIFF'S SUBPOENA'S SERVED SEPTEMBER 9, 2025, AND FURTHER REQUEST FOR BILL OF PEACE AND BRIEF IN SUPPORT THEREOF

COMES NOW, Defendant, First Acceptance Insurance Company of Georgia ("Defendant" or "FAGA"), by and through counsel, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-26(c) and 23-3-110 and hereby respectfully provides timely objection to Plaintiff's approximately 28 non-party discovery requests Plaintiff served on September 25, 2026. FAGA hereby further requests the court enter a protective order as to the 28 non-party discovery requests and further issue a bill of peace obligating Plaintiff to obtain leave of court prior to seeking further non-party discovery as well as initiating any motions practice in this matter. In support of this Motion, Defendant shows the Court as follows:

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Defendant's previously filed motion to dismiss and related briefings thoroughly set forth the underlying factual basis that comprise Plaintiff's claims. Instead of bloating the record by restating the statement facts from those previous filings, Plaintiff incorporates those statements of facts herein verbatim. However, without needlessly pontificating, Plaintiff's Complaint in substance alleges that Plaintiff worked with an insurance agent to obtain a policy of automobile insurance that Plaintiff anticipated to be issued, made payments on, made claims under, and received the benefits of claims from. Notwithstanding Plaintiff complains that her signature on the policy application, for the policy she expected to be issued was forged by the insurance agent. Plaintiff further complains that although she was anticipating a policy to be issued, the policy that was ultimately issue was of different limits than Plaintiff anticipated despite Plaintiff making no attempts to actual confirm the applicable limits of coverage prior to making claims under the policy. Plaintiff's Complaint also vaguely makes an alter ego argument relating to all defendants in this matter with the exception of FAGA which was omitted from such allegation.

On or about September 25, Plaintiff, who has already been verbally admonished by the court for utilizing A.I. Generated filings that were needlessly bloating the record, and has been put on notice that such continued usage may result in sanctions, served and filed 28 subpoena's totaling approximately 444 pages in length, to the following non-parties (non-parties titled as reflected in subpoenas):

1) Georgia Office of Commissioner of Insurance and Safety Fire;
2) Georgia Department of Revenue;
3) Docusign, Inc.;
4) Unique Insurance Company;
5) Insuremax Insurance Company;
6) AssuranceAmerica Insurance Company;
7) Southern General Insurance Company;
8) Peak Property and Casualty Insurance Company;
9) Progressive Freedom Insurance Company;
10) Progressive Mountain Insurance Company;
11) Crow, LLP;
12) Salesforce, Inc.;
13) Direct General Insurance Company;
14) Foremost Insurance Company Grand Rapids, Michigan;
15) Infinity Auto Insurance Company;
16) Infinity Select Insurance Company;
17) Liberty Mutual Personal Insurance Company;
18) Liberty Mutual Personal Insurance Company;
19) LM General Insurance Company;
20) The First Liberty Insurance Corporation;

21) Confie Insurance Services, Inc.;
22) Alliant Insurance Services, Inc.;
23) Bridgecrest Credit Company, LLC.;
24) MGA Insurance Company, Inc.;
25) American Modern Property and Casualty Insurance Company;
26) Coast National Insurance Company;
27) Infinity Casualty Insurance Company;
28) Dekalb County Police Department.

While, the subpoenas issued to the above listed non-parties are almost entirely incoherent, a surface review appears that they are seeking confidential information, which constitutes, trade secrets of FAGA, or otherwise confidential information of employees, former employees and agents of FAGA which FAGA is either contractually or statutorily obligated to protect. Defendant FAGA will not bloat the record by addressing the merits of each and every individual subpoena, which would undoubtedly take several hundreds of pages itself to do. Instead, Defendant as set forth below simply wholly objects to all the subpoenas globally and further requests this Court to enter a protective order against the 28 above stated subpoenas on the grounds that Plaintiff has failed to show good cause for the documents sought, and the non-party discovery appears to be solely made for the purpose of annoyance, embarrassment, oppression or undue burden and expense of FAGA and will undoubtedly lead to 28 individual motions battle between Plaintiff and each respective non-party in this action. Materially all of the subpoenas set forth October 22, 2026, as the date upon which the various Non-Parties must comply with the subpoenas.

ARGUMENT AND CITATION OF AUTHORITY

I. Defendant Objects Globally to all 28 subpoenas filed by Plaintiff on or about September 25, 2026.

As a threshold issue, the 28 non-party discovery requests constitute subpoenas controlled by O.C.G.A. § 24-13-23 and not Non-Party Requests For Production of Documents controlled by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34(c). O.C.G.A § 24-13-23 permits the Court, upon timely written motion, to quash or modify a subpoena where it is unreasonable and oppressive. A motion to quash must be made prior to the time specified for compliance in the subpoena. Georgia Government Transparency &Campaign Finance Commission v. New Georgia Project Action Fund, 366 Ga. App. 198, 204, 880 S.E.2d 635 (2022). Materially all of Plaintiff's subpoenas require compliance by October 22, 2026. Defendant's objection and request to quash are therefore timely.

Whether a subpoena is unreasonable and oppressive depends upon the nature and scope of the discovery sought. Bazemore v. State, 244 Ga. App 460, 463-464, 535 S.E.2d 830 (2000). When a motion to quash is filed, the party serving the subpoena bears the burden of establishing that the documents sought are relevant. Id. at 461. If relevance is established, the party moving to quash, bears the burden of demonstrating that the subpoena is unreasonable and oppressive. Id. at 463-464. The unreasonable and oppressive standard is tested by the peculiar facts arising from the subpoena itself and other proper sources. Kamensky v. Southern Oxygen Supply Co., 127 Ga. App. 343, 344, 193 S.E.2d 164 (1972) (affirming quashing of subpoena as unreasonable and oppressive where subpoena sought records concerning all of a business's customers despite the underlying controversy involving only a single customer).

Here, Plaintiff's claims concern a single transaction in which Plaintiff alleges she was fraudulently issued a personal automobile insurance policy as a result of her signature being forged by the insurance agent who assisted her. Despite these allegations of fraud, Plaintiff freely admits that she actively worked with the insurance agent to prepare the application, expected a policy to be issued, paid premiums on the policy, made claims under the policy, and received the benefit of claims made under the policy. Accordingly it appears Plaintiff is more aggrieved by the policy limits of the at issue policy, as opposed to any forgery or issuance of the policy. In any regard as set forth in the previously filed motion to dismiss, Georgia has a near complete bar to claims for negligence issuance of an insurance policy. Thus, the controversy before the Court concerns

Plaintiff's individual insurance application and the limits of the policy issued to Plaintiff. The documents targeted by Plaintiff's subpoenas extend far beyond this controversy as the subpoenas seek records from a seemingly erroneous array of unrelated third parties, including, governmental entities, insurance companies, technology companies, accounting and consulting firms, law enforcement, and other businesses. The subpoenas further target FAGA's confidential information and trade secrets and confidential information concerning current and former employees and agents, despite Plaintiff's claim arising solely from her individual automobile insurance transaction. Like the discovery quashed in Kamensky, Plaintiff's subpoenas extend beyond the individual transaction giving rise to the litigation and instead appear to seek all information relating to any business activity FAGA has ever taken- which is wholly irrelevant to the claims set forth by Plaintiff. Georgia law has made clear that the irrelevancy of discovery requests bears directly upon the unreasonable and oppressive nature of those requests. Kamensky, 127 Ga. App. at 343-344.

Accordingly, the nature and scope of Plaintiff's subpoenas, reviewed against the allegations which form Plaintiff's Complaint, render the subpoenas irrelevant, unreasonable, and oppressive. Defendant therefore respectfully requests that the Court pursuant to O.C.G.A § 24-13-23 quash all of Plaintiff's 28 above enumerated subpoenas.

II. Defendant is Entitled to a Protective Order Under O.C.G.A § 9-11-26(c).

O.C.G.A §9-11-26(c) authorizes the Court, for good cause shown, to enter any order justice requires to protect a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense, including an order limiting the terms, conditions, or sequence of discovery. O.C.G.A § 9-11-26(c). The Court may prohibit discovery altogether, permit discovery only on specified terms or conditions, change the method of discovery, or restrict the disclosure of trade secrets and other confidential commercial information. General Motors, LLC v. Buchanan, 313 Ga. 811, 815, 874 S.E.2d 52 (2022). The party seeking protection bears the burden of establishing good cause through a specific demonstration of fact rather than stereotyped conclusory assertions. Id.; Young v. Jones, 149 Ga. App. 819, 256 S.E.2d 58 (1979). What constitutes good cause depends upon the circumstances presented and rests within the trial court's discretion. Harris v. Tenet Healthsystem Spalding, 322 Ga. App. 894, 901, 746 S.E.2d 618 (2013). The Court's determination of good cause is based upon the effect the proposed discovery would have on the party or person from whom discovery is sought, not the intent or motivation of the requesting party. General Motors, 313 Ga. at 821-822. Accordingly, substantial evidence of bad faith or a purpose to harass is not a prerequisite to protection under O.C.G.A § 9-11-26(c). Id.

Here, the substance of Plaintiff's subpoenas demonstrates the need for protection. Plaintiff has directed discovery to numerous seemingly erroneous third parties seeking information that has no relation to the allegations set forth by Plaintiff's Complaint. Disclosure of such information without a demonstrated relationship to Plaintiff's claims would result in the unnecessary disclosure of sensitive and confidential information having no bearing on the controversy before the Court. Additionally, a cursory review of the subpoenas will quickly demonstrate to the Court, that each of the various 28 non-parties, are likely to file their own objections, thus triggering 28 distinct discovery motions battles that will undoubtedly result in thousands of pages of briefings filed into action.

Georgia courts recognize that the privacy interests of non-parties must be accommodated in the discovery process. Hickey v. RREF BB SBL Acquisitions, LLC, 336 Ga. App. 411, 417, 785 S.E.2d 72 (2016) (recognizing the availability of protective orders to ensure the confidentiality of information obtained through non-party discovery). Likewise, O.C.G.A § 9-11-26(c) expressly permits the Court to protect trade secrets and other confidential commercial information from unnecessary disclosure. Plaintiff's subpoenas implicate both concerns by targeting confidential business information and information concerning persons and entities outside the transaction forming the basis of Plaintiff's claims.

The disclosure of confidential and unrelated information targeted by Plaintiff's subpoenas when reviewed against the limited personal transaction at issue, established good cause to protect FAGA, its employees, contractors, vendors and agents from the unnecessary disclosure, burden and expense contemplated by O.C.G.A § 9-11-26(c) Defendant therefore respectfully requests entry of a protective order prohibiting the non-party discovery sought by Plaintiff and protecting FAGA's confidential information, trade secrets, and confidential information concerning its current and former employees and agents from disclosure.

III. The Court Should Enter a Bill of Peace Requiring Plaintiff to Obtain Leave of Court Before Further Filings.

O.C.G.A § 23-3-110 provides that, because it is in the interest of this State that there be an end to litigation, equity will entertain a bill of peace to avoid a multiplicity of actions and "in other similar cases." O.C.G.A § 23-3-110(a)(2)-(3). As ancillary to that equitable jurisdiction, the Court may grant a perpetual injunction. O.C.G.A § 23-3-110(b). Georgia law recognizes that preventing vexatious, oppressive, and ruinous litigation is a proper exercise of this equitable jurisdiction and that injunctions are favored where appropriate. Moreton Rolleston, Jr., Living Trust v. Kennedy, 277 Ga. 541, 542, 591 S.E.2d 834 (2004) (recognizing bill of peace and perpetual injunction requiring prior written court approval before additional lawsuits could be filed. A bill of peace may include reasonable filing restrictions, designed to prevent continued abusive litigation without depriving a litigant of meaningful access to the courts. Id. at 542-543; Howard v. Sharpe, 266 Ga. 771,772, 470 S.E.2d 678 (1996) (recognizing prior court approval as a reasonable restriction upon further litigation); Smith v. Adamson, 226 Ga. App. 698, 700, 487 S.E.2d 386 (1997) (upholding filing restrictions, including prior court approval, that did not completely deprive litigant of meaningful access to courts.).

Plaintiff's conduct through this action warrants similar judicial intervention. Plaintiff has filed approximately fourteen motions-all of which have been denied, in addition to approximately ten other erroneous filings. Plaintiff has also already been verbally admonished by this Court concerning her use of A.I. generated filings that needlessly bloated the record. Plaintiff's filings have already required Defendant and this Court to address discovery directed at 28 separate parties, including discovery seeking irrelevant, confidential, and commercially sensitive information. The present Motion itself results from Plaintiff's continued expansion of this litigation beyond the controversy alleged in her Complaint.

A bill of peace requiring prior leave of Court before Plaintiff makes any further filing (provides a direct mechanism to prevent that continued expansion without depriving Plaintiff of her access to the legal system. Such relief would not prohibit plaintiff from prosecuting her existing claims or responding to filings made by Defendant. Rather, prior judicial review would ensure that further affirmative filings and non-party discovery bear a legitimate relationship to the controversy before imposing additional burdens upon the Court, Defendant, and non-parties. Accordingly, Defendant respectfully requests that the Court enter a Bill of Peace requiring Plaintiff to obtain leave of Court before serving additional non-party discovery or initiating any further motions practice in this action.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendant respectfully requests that the Court: (1) quash Plaintiff's 28 non-party subpoenas pursuant to O.C.G.A § 24-13-23; (2) enter a protective order pursuant to O.C.G.A § 9-11-26(c) prohibiting the non-party discovery sought by Plaintiff and protecting FAGA's confidential information, trade secrets, and confidential information concerning its current and former employees and agents from disclosure; and (3) enter a Bill of Peace requiring Plaintiff to obtain leave of Court before serving additional non-party discovery or making further affirmative filings in this actions.

Respectfully submitted this 7th day of October, 2026.
